

Erik Raudsep on the Special Session: Erik Raudsep vows to continue the fight for equality for all!

Durham, NC
August 24, 2018

Erik Raudsep has been disheartened to hear that the Republican leadership has called a special session in regards to the proposed amendments. In order to rewrite two proposed constitutional amendments.

No amendment to our State Constitution should be done in haste. Our Constitution is the backbone to our legal system it is the defining statement that all of our general statutes find strength and power from. If any part of our Constitution is inherently flawed or worse still have the ability to be misinterpreted or misconstrued denying freedom and liberty to the population of North Carolina we have failed. Too many times in our recent past we have seen that haste by our General Assembly has caused us nothing but grief.

It is my honest and humble opinion that these two amendments were flawed from their very conception. Much like the federal government we have three branches of government in the great state of North Carolina. These three branches balance each other and no one branch is superior to another. This is the very success of our government. Both of these amendments threaten to upset that very balance by stripping powers from the Governor and re-investing them in the General Assembly. There is no amount of re-wording, re-describing, or re-inventing that will do anything to ensure that these two amendments will benefit the citizens of North Carolina.

About Raudsep 2018.

Raudsep 2018 is the campaign for the election of Erik Raudsep for District 31 for NC General Assembly. Erik is a small business owner in Durham North Carolina as a home inspector. He has been a member of the Republican party, Democratic party and for the last 9 years the Libertarian Party. Erik is steadfast in his belief that people should never serve their government however the government should serve the people. The government derives its power from the people and government should be mindful of that fact. This is why Erik vows to strongly fight for Fair Government that is for every citizen of North Carolina.
